Desc. : They know not what they do Should we kill others to exist ? Are we doomed to eliminate those around us to progress, to take their place, climb the ladder ? Would it not be better to replace the social elevator with the social jigsaw ? Is each person not best in his difference, his specificity, using his talents ? He must still have the means to discover, to practice and to live. In the twentieth century, we have killed over two hundred million people in the most horrific wars since the beginning of humanity. During the twenty-first, how many will be sacrificed ? The human being is sacred!

Desc. : Eat me! The disaster that struck the Japanese people we refer to freedom condition to deny our unique beings, with the potential for perfection but still interdependent, fragile, and liable jointly and severally for our destiny. We know that our most insignificant actions can have dramatic consequences crossing the point of no return. When will we accept that what is good for us is not necessarily favourable to others or to the world ? Only discoveries which benefit human development as a whole, the development of humanity and the universal environment should be taken forward. It would be relatively easy to choose between what could destroy us individually, collectively and worldwide on the one hand, and what could be built by revealing the genius of each - the only real wealth of humanity - on the other hand. From this reading, we can certainly check that the use of nuclear power has destruction as its first goal. Is not nuclear power - despite claims by the authorities - the «false nose» of nuclear weapons ? This energy resource is inherently toxic to human health. It is a major threat which can last tens of thousands of years. Its use should now be prohibited. We have other means a thousand times less dangerous. Let's hope that the thousands of deaths in Japan make us decide today to cease using nuclear power. Eat me, live, love and do what you want!

Desc. : Leave time The organization of our societies is based on the balance of power. Fear of others is maintained by those with Machiavellian power to keep us under their yoke. But if we were no longer afraid ? If we put at the heart of the debate, first of all, true security: one that would allow everyone adequate housing, at a price commensurate with his income and the importance of his family ? Then, a quality of life based on health products with less chemical pollution, and more natural foods ? Finally, a modicum of dignity where everyone is known and respected for who they are, regardless of race, social status ? Solutions exist. They are within our reach. What are we waiting for ?

Desc. : It is said that the winner of the Nobel Prize for Peace in 1983, the mustachioed Lech Walesa, leader of the Polish Solidarity historical movement, reportedly said during a visit to France in 1981: "Corruption has made Western democracy ill." This is still true and evil even worse. Can it be seen, at all levels and in all sectors, that compromise, corruption and misappropriations of all kinds multiply. With the lure of personal gain of being worshipped as the supreme value, only the cynics have the right to live decently. Must One must be an expert in eliminating others, giving priority of to those who helped you climb the social ladder. On this basis, it is clear that what are called diseases of civilization grow exponentially and that in all countries. Some are sick because of their greed and others because of their poverty. To treat these ailments, the order prescribed by prescription of specialists, and which everyone is in this matter, is clear. This is the distribution, recognition and exchange. But would we accept the loss of a few advantages gained here to increase social progress there elsewhere? Do we really want out of to leave a society of seduction, theft and deception to enter the one where talents are mutually esteemed. ? Are we willing to earn less to so that others may earn more than others? Would we be willing to change our culture so that people are judged on the basis of their humanity rather than on their bank balance? (some would say - I don't see the connection).
